Mayor Jenes has called a public meeting for the purpose of obtaining pecuniary aid for the sufferers. It will be held this afternoon in Ludepeniace Square. Much sympathy is felt and expressed in this city for the unfortunate persons who lost their all by the conflagration, and many of our citiz as hang contributed liberally for their relief. The corporation of the Northern Liberties have contributed St0,000, and taken other means to assist the sofferers. This general promptness to relieve is very creditable.

The inquest upon the eleventh victim of the fire was held at the bouse of Hiram Chester, in Coatesst below Sixth, and the unfortunate sufferer proved to be a lad aged 10 years, named Jesse Gillam, Jr. The history of the doath of this bay, and the severe trial of his mother, (during his father's absence at Trenton, N. J.) is, indeed, heart-rending. In the afternoon, Mr. Chester west down to the scene of the condagration, and while beholding the sublime but destructive view before him, remembered that his brother in law, Mr. Gillam, resided in the immediate vicinity. In Summon's Court, and was out of the city. He immediately went over and found the house already ignited by the flames, and at once novised Mrs. Gillam and her little son and daughter to go to his house. They went, and after eating their suppers, retired to bed shout 10 clock. In the meantime, Mr. Chester had been again at the fire, and by the time he returned, the whole of the property, with all the household goods, were destroyed. Just before retiring himself with his wife, Mrs. Chester thought she would look out at the fire, and as she did so, imagined she observed something lying on the paverner the low. She attracted the attention of her husband, who went down stairs, and there found the little boy stretched out, dead. He had fallen from the third story chamber of the bouse, in which he had been put to bed along with his cousin, Mr. Chester's son—having evidently got up for the purpose of going into his mother's room for a drink, and missing his way, the house being strange, for else fell out while in a somnambulic state. The Jury decided upon a verdict in this case in accordance with the above.

The Green House was then proceeded toward, and upon arriving at that spot it was almost completely besieged with men, women and children, anxious to get a glimpse of the corpose removed thither for recognition, thinking it quite likely some missing member of their family could be foand. The scene was spalling, and such as caused a thrill of horror to co missing member of their family could be found. The scene was appalling, and such as caused a thrill of horror to come over us, as we looked over the assembled mass, and heard their bitter lamentations for the loss of departed friends. The first person brought to the view of the Jury was the body of a young female, aged 13 years, which was subsequently recognized by Mr. Lawrence McKea, a sailmaker, who had lost his all by the calamity, having resided at 193 Front st. The daughter was named Eilen Teresa, and just before the explosion was observed by him in front of the door with her little brother, Samuel, aged 9 years, who is also missing. At the same exciting moment another daughter, Mary, also disappeared, and has not been heard of I it is presumed that they, too, have fallen a prey to the ravages of the devouring element. The body of Eilen was so awfully burned and matilated that to render the features perceptible was almost impossible. However, Mr. McKee claimed the deceased offspring as his own, from the peculiar shoes she had on, and a mark on her bead. No one can even have the most distant idea of the feelings of this heart rending picture, amid the ravings of a heart broken father. Mr. McKee informed as that out of six children, which were all in good health and spirits at the dinner table yesterday, one half of them has thus been torn from him, and the ties which so firmly bound together that little family were burst asunder in so short a period.

Another was recognized as D brothy Hand, aged about 25 years. Upon her shockingly lacerated body were nine wounds, that would cause the reader to shudder if they had witnessed them; we pass over to the next, which was an unknown white woman 35 years of age. The body of this person was not so badly burned, outwardly, but it was thought that her injuries were received principally from fright and other causes, arising out of the explosion.

At the time of the explosion, a Jew family, named Marcus, (sigar makers) who resided in Water at opposite the atore in which the accident happened, were sitting by their goods which they had removed. Marcus Marcus, aged 17, Caroline Marcus, aged 16, Issac Marcus, aged 11, two sons, and a deather with the father, Joseph Marcus. were all overwhelmed in the rains and smoke and flames. The young man was horribly burned, and died at the hospital: the girl was borne away dy-ing, and has not been heard of, and the lad is missand a daughter, with the father, Jo ing, and has not been heard of, and the lad is missing. The father in the effor, to save his children, was badly injured.

A great many thieves have been arrested by the police, and they have been sent to prison by the Mayors of the City and Northern Liberties.

This morning a number of charred trunks and half-consumed skulls of human beings were removed from the ruins. Several whole bodies of men, women and children were also found under the failen bricks, and taken to the N. E. police station-house.

Numerous half distracted mothers, fathers, sis-ters and brothers visited the scene of the fire and the station-houses to-day, in search of missing loved ones.

Thousands of people were collected about the burned district, the blackened and desolate appearance of which no pen can describe.

Ald from Abroad.

Ald from Abroad.

In the course of the night various Fire Companies from Camden and several of the neighboring viliages arrived on the ground; also the Delaware and Water Witch Eogine Companies, from Wilmington. As each Company reached the scene of action they were greeted with a shout of welcome from our own firemen and from crowds of bystanders. Fortunately their services were required only to extinguish the smouldering embers of the ruins. Dispatches were also sent on to New-York (very unnecessarily, as we think,) calling for aid. The Fire Committee of the Common Council of that city, then in session at the City Hall, immediately had the bells rung; extra cars were engaged, and in an incredibly short time a force of about 400 firemen, with their apparatus, were ready to ome on to our aid. At 104 o'clock, however, a dispatch from Mayor Jones was received, stating that their services would be unnecessary. Such prompt action on the part of New-York deserves our thanks as freely as if they had been the means of saving much property. Similar calls for aid were also sent to Baltimore, which were, no doubt, responded to with equal generosity.

Extravagant Estimates.

These calls for relief were very extravagant. The dispatch to New-York, to which Mayor Jones is said to have authorized his name to be attached was absurd. It stated that "the upper part of the city was all in flames," and again, that "about a mile square of the city was in flames," and that "it was impossible to arrest the progress of the flames with the force of the city." Such wild assertions are unworthy of full grown men. They were not entertained by any reasonable man that we saw. After the panic produced by the explosion had subsided, no one entertained a doubt but that the fire would soon be checked with our own force. The actual area of the fire, instead of being "a mile square," is about 760 by 775 feet; covering about ten acres of ground.

There was equal extravagance in the value of the property destroyed. Some have even put it as three millions to five millions. We have stated above our opinion of this. We also have an estimate from a gentieman who considers the loss in real estate about $700,000. On many lots the property is more valuable now than it was before the lire; the destruction of buildings being a positive relief to the owners in some instances, though disastrons to the compensation.
